Career Profile

Teaching:

My experience as a student, teacher and researcher in a diverse cultural setting has made me more adaptable and culturally sensitive. Working with children and adolescents in diverse setting has strengthened my knowledge on the relationship between culture and human development. I have been teaching courses at the Masters and PhD level for the last 31 years. The use of varied pedagogy is based on an evaluation of the course content and student appraisal. The pedagogy conglomerates lecture, group discussions, project assignments, observations in natural settings. The prime intention is to bridge the gap between theory and practice.

Research:

Major Research Areas:

1. Cognitive and language development
2. Socio-emotional Development
3. Socio-cultural context and human development
4. Application of cognitive and social developmental research in education.
5. Intervention research for enhancing positive growth in children and youth.
6. Development of atypical children

The research findings have significantly contributed to the field of early childood education, Youth training programs, parent counseling, teacher education, text book development and curriculum development.
