Programme Objectives:

The M.A. in Hispanic Studies aims to develop the following:

Advanced Literary and Cultural Competence

- Equip students with deep knowledge of Hispanic literature, genres (novel, theatre, poetry, travel writing, migration narratives), and thematic studies.

Theoretical and Critical Engagement

- Introduce major schools of literary theory and criticism (structuralism, poststructuralism, psychoanalysis, feminism, postcolonialism, ecocriticism) and foster the ability to apply them to texts.

Comparative and Interdisciplinary Perspectives

- Encourage cross-cultural, comparative, and interdisciplinary approaches by situating Hispanic texts within global intellectual, historical, and cultural contexts.

Analytical Skills

- Develop advanced skills in textual analysis and academic writing, enabling students to produce scholarly essays, reviews, and presentations.

Professional and Applied Skills

- Provide training in translation, interpretation, teaching methodologies, and digital humanities to prepare students for careers in academia, cultural institutions, media, and language industries.

Critical Reflection on Identity and Society

- Explore themes of migration, memory, hybridity, and identity to foster critical reflection on contemporary socio-political issues in Hispanic contexts.

Programme Outcomes

By the end of the programme, graduates will be able to:

- Demonstrate advanced knowledge of the Hispanic literary traditions across genres (novel, poetry, theatre, travel writing, new literary forms).
- Apply theoretical frameworks (structuralist, psychoanalytic, feminist, postcolonial, ecocritical, etc.) to critically interpret literary and cultural texts.
- Conduct basic research using appropriate methodologies, producing well-structured academic essays, term papers, and presentations.
- Engage with intercultural perspectives by analyzing texts that address migration, exile, displacement, and transnational identities.
- Employ professional skills in translation, interpretation, teaching Spanish as a foreign language, and digital/visual media applications.

- Critically evaluate the intersections of literature, history, memory, and identity in Hispanic contexts.
- Communicate effectively in Spanish at an advanced level (CEFR C1), both orally and in writing, across academic and professional domains.
- Contribute to inclusive and global scholarship by situating Hispanic Studies within comparative, interdisciplinary, and multicultural frameworks.
- Undertake an intensive research / academic project
