

Annexure B:

University of Delhi
Ordinance XX (...)
Centre for Independence and Partition Studies

The Centre for Independence and Partition Studies (CIPS) shall be constituted under Ordinance XX (..) of the Ordinances of the University. The Centre for Independence and Partition Studies, as a multi-disciplinary centre, shall focus on different facets of the struggle for freedom and the reasons and impact of Partition and emerge, in due course of time, as a specialized resource centre to facilitate such studies. For the purpose of launching academic programmes, designing curriculum, research programmes etc., the Centre for Independence and Partition Studies (CIPS) shall be constituent of the Faculty of Social Science.

1. Objectives

The major objectives of the Centre would include, inter alia, the following:

- (i) To promote the study of those people and events that are mostly disregarded and forgotten or have received a biased and prejudiced treatment in history-writing, and thereby highlight such stories, including in Indian languages (under the 8th Schedule of the Constitution of India) and local dialects, that seldom find space in mainstream historical narratives. This should include the role played by unsung tribal heroes, leaders of marginal groups and women in the freedom struggle.
- (ii) To facilitate a full investigation of the intense politics surrounding Partition.
- (iii) To study and research the invasions, and consequent sufferings and slavery that occurred in the past 1300 years.
- (iii) To undertake an exercise to map the location and other details of Partition victims including their routes of migration and to include narratives about their sorrows, challenges and triumphs.

(iv) To revisit the lives of these victims by conducting interviews and creating a repository of oral history transcripts.

(v) To collect and preserve the private papers of individual leaders, academics and diplomats who have left behind valuable and related writings. To include institutional papers wherever relevant.

(vi) To undertake research, collaboration and develop linkages including MoUs with similarly placed or related research centres and academic institutions.

(vii) To set up a comprehensive library dedicated to the study on the subject.

(viii) To create a strong digital and electronic database, and make it open-source wherever feasible, for larger dissemination of knowledge in the field.

(ix) To carry out publications of reports, books and journals in the relevant area matching high professional standards.
